10 Islamic Stories for Kids

Volume 20

By
Mansoor Ali Shah

Published by
KDP

© 2025 Mansoor Ali Shah

All rights reserved.

No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means—electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise—without the prior written permission of the copyright holder.

This book is intended for children aged 5-10 years. The stories and teachings are based on authentic Islamic principles, including references to Hadith, and are designed to promote positive moral values and character development. The content is presented in a simple and engaging dialogue format, tailored for young readers.

While the stories are carefully crafted to be age-appropriate, parents and guardians are encouraged to read the book with their children to ensure full understanding and provide additional context when needed. For further clarification on the Islamic teachings mentioned, readers are encouraged to consult qualified scholars or trusted Islamic resources.

All efforts have been made to present the teachings of Islam accurately. However, readers are advised to seek further knowledge from authoritative sources to gain a comprehensive understanding of the subject matter.

The Lantern of Sacrifice

It’s a calm evening. Mansoor, a curious 8-year-old boy, is sitting on the porch with his father, Baba, gazing at the stars.

Mansoor:
Baba, can you tell me a story tonight? Something about the Qur’an?

Baba:
Of course, my dear. Let me share a story inspired by a beautiful verse from the Qur’an:
"And of the people is he who sells himself, seeking means to the approval of Allah. And Allah is kind to [His] servants." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:207).

Mansoor:
What does it mean to sell yourself, Baba?

Baba:
It means to dedicate yourself entirely to pleasing Allah, even if it’s hard or requires sacrifice. Let me tell you a story to explain it better.

Once upon a time, there was a brave boy named Salim. He loved to play with his favorite lantern, which glowed the brightest in the village. One day, Salim learned about a family in their village whose house had burned down. They were left with nothing and needed light to see at night.

Mansoor:
Oh no! What did Salim do, Baba?

Baba:
At first, Salim was torn. He loved his lantern dearly. But then he remembered the verse I just shared. Salim thought, “If I give my lantern to them, I will make Allah happy, and He will reward me in ways far greater.”

That night, Salim walked to the family’s temporary shelter. He held the lantern tightly and hesitated for a moment. He whispered, “Ya Allah, help me do the right thing.” Then he knocked on their door and handed them the lantern. The family was overjoyed, and their smiles lit up the room even more than the lantern.

Mansoor:
That was very kind of Salim, Baba! But wasn’t he sad about losing his lantern?

Baba:
He was, at first. But something amazing happened.

The next morning, Salim woke up to find an even bigger lantern on his doorstep. A kind merchant who had heard of Salim's generosity gifted it to him. Salim was overwhelmed with gratitude and realized that Allah had rewarded his sacrifice in a way he never expected.

Mansoor:
Wow! So, Allah took care of him because he helped others?

Baba:
Exactly, my son. Allah is always kind to His servants, especially those who sacrifice for His sake. When we give to others for Allah's pleasure, He gives us even more—sometimes in this life and always in the Hereafter.

From that day on, Salim shared his new lantern with anyone who needed it. He learned that the more he gave, the more blessings he received. His heart was always full of joy and peace.

Mansoor:
Baba, I want to be like Salim. I'll give my toys to Ali next door since he doesn't have many.

Baba:
That’s wonderful, Mansoor. Always remember, when you give for Allah’s sake, you’re lighting your own path to Jannah.

Mansoor:
Thank you, Baba. I’ll try my best to always make Allah happy!

Baba:
That’s my boy. May Allah always guide and bless you.

The Straight Path

It’s a peaceful Friday evening. Mansoor is sitting with Baba in their living room after attending Jummah prayers. Mansoor looks curious as he gazes at the prayer mat.

Mansoor:
Baba, why does everyone say it’s so important to follow the right path in Islam? How do we know what the right path is?

Baba:
That’s a very good question, Mansoor. Allah Subhanahu Wa Ta’ala says in the Qur’an:
"O you who have believed, enter into Islam completely and do not follow the footsteps of Satan. Indeed, he is to you a clear enemy." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:208)

Mansoor:
What does “enter into Islam completely” mean, Baba?

Baba:
It means we should follow all of Allah’s commands and teachings in every part of our life—not just sometimes or when it feels easy. Let me tell you a story to help you understand.

There was a boy named Saad who loved to play outside with his friends. One day, while playing, Saad's friends suggested sneaking into the neighbor's garden to take some of their fruits. At first, Saad said no because he knew it wasn't right. But his friends kept saying, "It's just a small thing. No one will notice."

Mansoor:
Oh no! Did Saad listen to them?

Baba:
Yes, he did. He thought, "Maybe just this once won't hurt." But after taking the fruits, he felt very guilty. Later that day, Saad told his mother what happened. She reminded him of the verse I just shared and said, "Saad, following even one step of Satan can lead us to bigger mistakes. When you listen to Allah's teachings in everything, you protect yourself from such traps."

Mansoor:
What did Saad do after that, Baba?

Baba:
Saad realized his mistake and decided to apologize to the neighbor. He returned the fruits and promised never to do it again. The neighbor was very kind and forgave him. From that day on, Saad always reminded his friends to make good choices and avoid even small wrong actions.

Mansoor:
So, even small bad things can lead to bigger ones?

Baba:
Exactly, my son. That's why Allah tells us to follow Islam completely. It's like walking on a straight path—if you take even one wrong turn, you might get lost.

Mansoor:
Baba, I'll always try to stay on the straight path. And if I make a mistake, I'll fix it like Saad did.

Baba:
MashAllah, that's a wonderful decision, Mansoor. Remember, Allah loves those who turn back to Him and try their best to follow His guidance.

The Warning Light

It’s a quiet afternoon. Mansoor and Baba are fixing a small toy car together. Baba pauses for a moment to tell Mansoor a valuable lesson from the Qur’an.

Mansoor:
Baba, why do you always say it’s important to stay on the right path? Sometimes, it feels hard to know what’s right and what’s wrong.

Baba:
That’s a good question, Mansoor. Allah Subhanahu Wa Ta’ala says in the Qur’an:
"But if you deviate after clear proofs have come to you, then know that Allah is Exalted in Might and Wise." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:209)

It means that Allah has given us clear signs and teachings to guide us. If we turn away after knowing what’s right, it can lead us to trouble. Let me tell you a story to explain.

Once, there was a boy named Umar who got a new bicycle. He was so excited to ride it that he didn't pay much attention to the safety instructions his father gave him. His father warned him, "Umar, always check the warning light on the bike. If it's red, it means something is wrong, and you need to stop and fix it."

For a few days, Umar followed the advice and rode safely. But one day, he saw the warning light blinking and thought, "It's probably not a big deal. I'll just keep riding."

Mansoor:
Oh no, Baba! What happened to Umar?

Baba:
As he rode down a steep hill, his brakes stopped working because the warning light was trying to tell him they needed fixing. Umar lost control of his bike and fell. He was hurt, and the bike was damaged.

When his father found him, Umar said, "I should have listened to the warning light. I ignored the sign and got hurt."

Mansoor:
That must have been so scary! Did Umar fix his bike after that?

Baba:
Yes, but more importantly, Umar learned a valuable lesson. The warning light was like Allah's guidance—it was there to protect him. He promised never to ignore it again. Just like Umar learned to trust the warning light, we must trust Allah's teachings and follow them.

Mansoor:
So, if we don't listen to Allah's guidance, it's like ignoring the warning signs?

Baba:
Exactly, Mansoor. Allah is All-Wise and knows what's best for us. His guidance protects us, and when we follow it, we stay safe and happy. If we ever make a mistake, we can turn back to Allah and fix it, just like Umar fixed his bike.

Mansoor:
Thank you for the story, Baba. I'll always try to follow Allah's teachings and fix my mistakes if I make any.

Baba:
MashAllah, that's the best thing you can do, my son. May Allah always guide you and keep you safe.

The Waiting Game

Mansoor and Baba are walking in the park after Asr prayer. Mansoor notices dark clouds gathering in the sky, making him curious about something Baba mentioned during their prayer.

Mansoor:
Baba, why does the Qur'an sometimes talk about people waiting for something big to happen?

Baba:
That's a great question, my son. Allah Subhanahu Wa Ta'ala says in the Qur'an:
"Do they await but that Allah should come to them in covers of clouds and the angels [as well] and the matter is [then] decided? And to Allah [all] matters are returned." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:210)

This verse reminds us that some people delay doing what's right, thinking they can wait until something extraordinary happens. But by then, it might be too late.

Mansoor:
What do they wait for, Baba?

Baba:
They wait for miracles or signs, forgetting that Allah has already given them clear guidance. Let me share a story about a boy named Rayan to explain.

Rayan loved playing soccer. One day, his mother told him to clean his room before he went out to play. But Rayan thought, “I’ll do it later. It’s not a big deal.”

When he got back from playing, his mother reminded him again, but Rayan still said, “I’ll do it after dinner.” He kept delaying until it was bedtime.

Suddenly, his father came into the room and saw the mess. He was upset and said, “Rayan, I gave you plenty of time to do what you were told. Now it’s too late.”

Mansoor:
Oh no! What happened next, Baba?

Baba:
Rayan felt bad and apologized, but he learned an important lesson. Waiting too long to do what’s right can have consequences.

This is like the people mentioned in the verse. Instead of acting on Allah’s guidance, they wait for a dramatic sign, like angels or clouds, to force them to believe. But by the time such signs appear, it will be the Day of Judgment, and they can’t change their actions anymore.

Mansoor:
So, we should never delay doing what's right?

Baba:
Exactly, Mansoor. When we know what Allah wants from us, we should act right away. Delaying can lead to regret.

Mansoor:
I understand, Baba. From now on, I'll try to do what's right as soon as I can.

Baba:
MashAllah, that's a wonderful decision, my son. Remember, Allah is always watching over us and guiding us with His wisdom. It's up to us to follow His path without waiting for extraordinary signs.

Mansoor:
Thank you for teaching me, Baba. I'll start by helping Mama with her chores today.

Baba:
That's my boy. May Allah always bless you and keep you on the straight path.

The Gift That Was Forgotten

Mansoor and Baba are sitting in their backyard under a tree. Baba holds a book in his hand, while Mansoor plays with a toy car.

Mansoor:
Baba, why do you always remind me to say Alhamdulillah when I get something nice?

Baba:
Because everything we have is a gift from Allah, Mansoor. Allah says in the Qur'an:
"Ask the Children of Israel how many a sign of evidence We have given them. And whoever exchanges the favor of Allah [for disbelief] after it has come to him - then indeed, Allah is severe in penalty." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:211)

This verse reminds us not to take Allah's blessings for granted and to always be thankful. Let me tell you a story about a boy named Zaid.

Zaid loved drawing, and one day, his uncle gifted him a big box of crayons with all the colors he could imagine. He was so happy and promised to take care of it.

At first, Zaid used the crayons carefully, creating beautiful pictures and always thanking his uncle and Allah for the gift. But after a while, he started leaving the crayons lying around. He even broke some of them without caring.

One day, when he wanted to draw a special picture, he couldn't find most of his crayons. The ones he found were broken or missing colors. Zaid realized he hadn't taken care of the gift. He felt sad and wished he had been more careful.

Mansoor:
Oh no, Baba! What did Zaid do then?

Baba:
He told his uncle what happened and apologized. His uncle forgave him but reminded him, "When someone gives you a gift, you should take care of it and be grateful. That way, you can enjoy it for a long time."

This is the same with Allah's blessings. He has given us so many gifts—our health, family, friends, and even the air we breathe. If we don't appreciate and take care of them, we lose out.

Mansoor:
So, saying Alhamdulillah is like taking care of the gift?

Baba:
Yes, Mansoor. Saying Alhamdulillah shows we are grateful, and it reminds us to use Allah's blessings in the right way. It also makes Allah happy, and He might give us even more blessings.

Mansoor:
I understand now, Baba. I'll always try to take care of what I have and thank Allah for it.

Baba:
MashAllah, that's the right attitude. Always remember, the more grateful we are, the more blessings Allah gives us.

The Shiny Toy and the Hidden Treasure

Mansoor and Baba sit on a park bench after a walk. Mansoor has a shiny new toy car in his hand and watches other children playing nearby.

Mansoor:
Baba, look at that boy's robot! It's so shiny and cool. I wish I had that instead of this car.

Baba:
Mansoor, what makes you think his robot is better than your car?

Mansoor:
It's big, it moves by itself, and everyone is watching it. My car is so simple.

Baba:
Let me tell you something important, Mansoor. Allah says in the Qur'an:
"Beautified for those who disbelieve is the life of this world, and they ridicule those who believe. But those who fear Allah are above them on the Day of Resurrection. And Allah gives provision to whom He wills without account." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:212)

This verse teaches us that sometimes the things of this world seem very attractive, but they don't last forever. What matters most is what we take with us to the Hereafter.

Mansoor:
What do you mean, Baba? How can we take anything to the Hereafter?

Baba:
Not toys or shiny things, my son, but good deeds, like being kind, sharing, praying, and remembering Allah. These are treasures that stay with us forever. Let me tell you a story.

Once, a man found a shiny, beautiful box in the market. It was so bright that he spent all his money on it. He brought it home, only to realize the box was empty. His neighbor, on the other hand, bought a small, plain wooden box. Inside, it was full of gold coins!

Mansoor:
The wooden box was better because it had the treasure inside, right?

Baba:
Exactly! The shiny box only looked good on the outside. Just like that, the things of this world, like toys or wealth, might seem very attractive, but they're like the shiny box—they don't last. Good deeds, on the other hand, are like the gold coins in the wooden box. They might not always be visible, but they are the real treasure.

Mansoor:
So, I should focus on good deeds instead of wishing for shiny things?

Baba:
Yes, my dear. It's okay to enjoy toys and other blessings, but always remember that they are temporary. What really matters is what we do to please Allah. Those who remember this will have a reward much greater than anything in this world on the Day of Judgment.

Mansoor:
Thank you, Baba. I'll try to focus on being kind and thankful instead of wishing for what others have.

Baba:
MashAllah, that's the spirit, Mansoor. Always be grateful, and you'll see how Allah blesses you even more.

The Straight Path

Mansoor and Baba are walking through a forest trail during a family picnic. Mansoor notices several small paths branching off from the main one.

Mansoor:
Baba, why are there so many small paths? Should we try walking on one of them?

Baba:
Mansoor, do you see how the main path is clear and straight, while the smaller ones look overgrown and uneven?

Mansoor:
Yes, Baba. The main path looks easier to walk on, but the other paths seem more exciting. What if one of them leads to a hidden treasure?

Baba:
Ah, my son, this reminds me of a lesson from the Qur'an. Allah says:
"Mankind was [of] one religion [before their deviation]; then Allah sent the prophets as bringers of good tidings and warners and sent down with them the Scripture in truth to judge between the people concerning that in which they differed." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:213)

This verse tells us that Allah sent prophets to guide people to the straight path—the path that leads to His pleasure and Jannah. The smaller paths might seem interesting, but they often lead people astray.

Mansoor:
But, Baba, why do people choose the other paths if the straight one is so clear?

Baba:
Sometimes, people think those paths will bring them something better or more exciting, just like you thought there might be treasure. But they forget to trust Allah's guidance. The straight path may seem simple, but it's the only one that leads to success in this life and the Hereafter.

Let me tell you a story.

A wise guide once showed two travelers a map to a beautiful garden. One traveler followed the guide's directions and reached the garden safely. The other ignored the guide and took a side path because he thought it looked more adventurous. He ended up lost in a dark forest.

Mansoor:
The traveler who followed the guide must have been so happy when he reached the garden!

Baba:
Exactly, Mansoor. That's why Allah sent prophets and books like the Qur'an—to guide us. If we follow Allah's guidance, we'll find peace and blessings in this life and the Hereafter.

Mansoor:
I understand, Baba. We should always stick to the straight path, even if the other ones look tempting.

Baba:
MashAllah, my son. Remember, Allah promises to guide those who truly believe and seek His help. Stay close to His guidance, and you'll never feel lost.

The Test of Patience

Mansoor and Baba are planting a small garden in their backyard. Mansoor seems frustrated because the seeds are taking too long to grow.

Mansoor:
Baba, why are these seeds taking so long? I wanted to see flowers today, but there's nothing here except dirt.

Baba:
Patience, my son. Beautiful things take time. This reminds me of a lesson from the Qur'an. Allah says:
"Or do you think that you will enter Paradise while such [trial] has not yet come to you as came to those who passed on before you? They were touched by poverty and hardship and were shaken until [even their] messenger and those who believed with him said, 'When is the help of Allah?' Unquestionably, the help of Allah is near." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:214)

This verse teaches us that life's trials are like waiting for seeds to grow. They test our patience and trust in Allah's plan.

Mansoor:
But, Baba, why do we have to face tests? Can't Allah just give us everything right away?

Baba:
Mansoor, think of this garden. If we didn't work hard to plant the seeds, water them, and take care of them, would we truly appreciate the flowers when they bloom?

Mansoor:
I guess not. It would feel less special if it was too easy.

Baba:
Exactly! Trials make us stronger and teach us to be grateful. Allah tests us, just as He tested the prophets and their followers. They faced hunger, hardships, and even fear, but they stayed patient because they trusted Allah.

Let me tell you a story.

There was once a boy who wanted to climb the tallest mountain to see the sunrise. The path was rocky, and he often stumbled. At one point, he wanted to give up. But his guide reminded him that the most beautiful views come after the hardest climbs. When he reached the top, the sunrise was so breathtaking that he forgot all his struggles.

Mansoor:
So, the climb was like a test, and the sunrise was the reward?

Baba:
That's right, my son. Just like the boy, we must stay strong during tests and trust that Allah's help is near. The flowers you're waiting for will bloom, just as Allah's rewards will come to those who are patient and steadfast.

Mansoor:
Thank you, Baba. I'll try to be more patient with the seeds—and with life's tests too.

Baba:
MashAllah, Mansoor. Always remember, the harder the test, the greater the reward. And Allah's help is always near for those who believe and stay patient.

Sharing is Caring

Mansoor and Baba are sitting on a bench in the park, sharing a box of snacks. Mansoor notices a boy sitting nearby, looking sad and hungry.

Mansoor:
Baba, that boy over there looks hungry. Should we give him some of our snacks?

Baba:
That's a thoughtful idea, Mansoor. Do you know Allah has guided us to share what we have? In the Qur'an, Allah says:
"They ask you what they should spend. Say, 'Whatever you spend of good is [to be] for parents, relatives, orphans, the needy, and the traveler. And whatever you do of good—indeed, Allah is Knowing of it.'" (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:215)

Allah loves when we share our blessings with others, especially those in need.

Mansoor:
But Baba, what if we don't have enough snacks for ourselves after sharing?

Baba:
Mansoor, let me tell you something beautiful about giving. When we give to others, Allah blesses us with even more. The Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) said, “Charity does not decrease wealth.”

Think of it like this: if you plant seeds in the ground, you lose the seeds at first, but later, they grow into a big tree with lots of fruit. Sharing is like planting those seeds—Allah will reward you many times over.

Mansoor:
I like that, Baba. So, if I share now, I’m planting a seed of kindness?

Baba:
Exactly, my son! And remember, sharing isn’t just about food or money. Even a kind word or a smile can be charity.

Mansoor takes some cookies from their snack box and walks over to the boy.

Mansoor:
Here, you can have some of these. My Baba and I brought extra.

The boy smiles and thanks him.

When Mansoor returns, he sees the boy sharing the cookies with another child who also looked hungry.

Mansoor:
Baba, look! The boy is sharing the cookies I gave him with someone else.

Baba:
SubhanAllah, Mansoor. You see, kindness spreads. When you do something good, it inspires others to do the same. You’ve already planted your seed of kindness, and now it’s growing.

Mansoor smiles proudly.

Mansoor:
Baba, I want to do more good things like this. Maybe next time, we can bring extra food for more people.

Baba:
MashAllah, that’s a wonderful idea, Mansoor. Always remember, Allah sees all the good you do, even if it feels small. And He rewards those who give with a pure heart.

As they pack up to leave, Mansoor feels a warm sense of happiness, knowing he made someone’s day better. He promises himself to always look for opportunities to help others.

Trusting Allah's Plan

Mansoor and his father, Baba Javed, are sitting together under a tree in their backyard, enjoying a peaceful afternoon.

Mansoor:
Baba, do you remember when I really wanted to go to the fun fair? I was so excited, but we couldn’t go because of the rain. It made me so sad.

Baba:
Yes, Mansoor. I know you were disappointed. Sometimes, we really want something, but things don’t always turn out the way we expect. Do you know that this reminds me of something Allah says in the Qur’an?

Mansoor:
What does Allah say, Baba?

Baba:
Allah says in the Qur'an:
"Fighting has been enjoined upon you while it is hateful to you. But perhaps you hate a thing and it is good for you; and perhaps you love a thing and it is bad for you. And Allah Knows, while you know not." (Surah Al-Baqara, 2:216)

This verse teaches us that sometimes, what we dislike might actually be good for us, and what we love might not be good. Allah has a plan for us that we can't always see.

Mansoor:
But Baba, I really wanted to go to the fun fair! Why didn't we go? I thought it would be so much fun!

Baba:
I understand, Mansoor. We all feel that way sometimes. But sometimes, what we think is best for us isn't always what is best in the long run. Maybe Allah protected us from something we didn't know about, like a problem or difficulty at the fair.

Mansoor:
So, when I didn't get what I wanted, Allah might have been protecting me?

Baba:
Exactly, Mansoor! Allah knows what is truly good for us. We might not understand it right away, but we trust His wisdom. And even though we may not get everything we want, He always gives us what we need.

Mansoor:
That makes sense. I guess I was sad because I didn’t get what I wanted, but maybe there’s something even better waiting for me!
Baba:

That’s the right attitude, Mansoor. When you trust Allah’s plan, you’ll always find peace, knowing that He has something better for you, even if you can’t see it yet. Sometimes, waiting for the right moment makes everything even more special.

Mansoor smiles, feeling comforted by his father's words. He looks up at the sky, trusting that Allah has a plan for him, even when things don't go the way he expects.